

All Walks of life

Tracy Marry

She moved to New York 3 years ago and was originally from Texas. As she land a job as a recruiter, she notices that her boss was not respecting her when asked to do tasks. There were no "please" or question mark at the end of the sentence. She knew that if she did not do anything about it, it will keep happening. The same thing happened the following week. But this time she told her boss how she was feeling by saying, "if you want me to do something, you'll have to ask me the proper way." Always speak up for yourself if you feel mistreated.

As a mother, it was difficult for her to let her child do what they wanted. The child hated being put in stroller and car seat, always wanted to be carried. It took her a long time to finally say, "it stops here". One day she took her child to the supermarket in the stroller and she(child) kept screaming non stop. A lady came rushing at her and pulled her headphones out and said, ""Why don't you talk to her. Why don't you pick her up?" After this happened, she said she no longer cared about what other thinks because she understands what her daughter need. In life, it is not always about getting what you want.

Vaughn Terrol Lockette

This guy was part of a band called "The Uniques". In 1976, they are at their highest, touring up and down the east coast. But eventually things started to go down hill when their rhythm guitarist died. The band started to fall apart and he was eventually left to fend for himself alone. He is currently homeless due to lack of work experiences. In the end, you should always have a long term plan because you never know what will happen.

Asaka

This lovely lady grew up with high expectations in life. Her mother was a drill sergeant and father, olympic karate medalist. When she reached a goal, she will always set a new and bigger one after. When her kid turned 3, she found out that she was diagnosed with brain cancer and had about 10 years left. With the fear of leaving her daughter behind, her perspective in life changed. Sometimes we get caught up in trying to achieve certain desires in life that we forget what truly matters.

A medical condition called 'clammy hands' is when your hands are constantly wet. This individual, an assistant director at a middle school has that condition and each time when he shook people's hand, they would ask if he is nervous. He says that he will not allow the hand thing to hold him back and will not try to get rid of it, as it is his thunder as mentioned. You should be proud of who you are and the things that make you special as an individual.

Language was a struggle for this lady. She only started speaking at the age of 4. Being shy and timid got her no where in life. In this world, she feels like she is invisible, like dust.

Her job is a cleaning lady at a hotel. Her father says that she is good for nothing and this is embedded into her. The moral of this story is to get outside of your comfort zone and talk to more people.
